2:00 pm Saturday's Keynote speaker: Thomas Freese

Mr. Freese is an artist, storyteller, author, teaching artist and intuitive. Thomas has authored 11 books and 7 audio CDs, as well as written over 200 articles and reviews. He is a professional storyteller/musician and has performed around Kentuckiana, as well as in Alaska and Argentina. Thomas Freese creates a line of wood crafts, including jewelry, spoons, ornaments, pendants and wands with many traditional designs including Celtic interlaces, wood burning complex interwoven designs of lines and animals. He also works with bone, stone and antler.

His most recent book is Tree Spirits and Wood Wisdom, which gives the metaphysical meanings for over 100 trees/woods and gives many examples of the healing and protective powers of trees.

His books includes 6 titles of true tales of encounters with ghosts, spirits and angels...something he is very conversant with as a working psychic. As a Shaker singer, from 1996 to 2006 he learned many Shaker songs and also heard stories of spirit encounters at Pleasant Hill, and that provided material for his first book of Shaker Ghost Stories. As well, he has authored Haunted Battlefields of the South (Civil War ghosts), Eerie Encounters in Everyday Life, Ghosts Spirits and Angels: True Tales from Kentucky and Beyond... and other collections.

Collecting over 600 ghost stories, Mr. Freese has many programs that report on spirit encounters, including stories of animal ghosts. There are many stories of companion animals being active after death.

"I know people who say, if there are not dogs in heaven, then they don't want to go! We have very strong and loving bonds with our companion animals, and the relationship doesn't die when they cease their physical life." The wide variety of spirit animal stories stretches back into ancient lore.

Contact him via www.ThomasLFreese.com to book his skills as storyteller, musician, teaching artist or intuitive.

10 Greyhound Myths

Greyhounds are the major athlete of the canines. Often thought to be vicious because of the muzzles they wear. They are traded as commodities from track to track. Greyhounds are just about the gentlest dog around. While they are bred to hunt and to race – there is so much more to them.

MYTH: *Greyhounds need lots of exercise. There is a reason why they are known as the 45 mph couch potato. Greyhounds love sleeping and they are really good at it. Greys are built for speed and sprinting not for endurance. Although walks can be gradually lengthened to a couple of miles or for short hike, with adequate training. Daily (shorter) walks and some play time is usually enough to keep them happy and healthy.

MYTH: *Greyhounds are dangerous around cats and small animals.

Greyhounds are naturally gentle dogs, but as 'sight hounds' they easily see and often want to chase moving objects. They were bred to hunt rabbits and may mistake a small pet as one if it decided to run. But, many greyhounds are retired from racing because they refuse to or lose their drive to chase. This often can make them a greyt companion animal for smaller pets, when in the house. Outside can be a different story. Remember each greyhound is an individual, not all are safe around small animals, but some are. Your local greyhound placement group will help you identify the right greyhound for your circumstances.

MYTH: *Greyhounds are hyperactive Greyhounds are affectionately considered to be the laziest breed and may even out sleep a cat! They do love to play, like most any dog. A grey may bow and vocalize to let their human and animal friends know when they are ready. Playtime may end with "zoomies" – running around in circles – a hilarious, sometimes scary, infectious display of joy that may only last a few minutes before it is time to nap again. Just stay out of their way when they are making their laps.

MYTH: *Greyhounds are not cuddly. One of the best things about bigger dogs is that there is more of them to love. Many greys will take every opportunity to be near you...whether at your feet, on your lap, on the couch or...in your bed.

MYTH: *Greyhounds are suited to an outdoor environment.

With hardly any body fat and a very fine coat, greyhounds are susceptible to temperature extremes. In the winter it is often advisable to have your grey wear a coat when outside, you will learn to judge their temperature tolerance and how active they will be as to how to "dress" them. You do not want them overheating in the winter. If you keep your home cool, greyhound pajamas may be needed. Summer heat is very dangerous for all dogs. Monitor your pups when they are outside. They can only release heat from their body through the pads of their feet and when panting...neither of which are very effective when they are overheated.

MYTH: *Greyhounds are large dogs and therefore need loads of space to live in.

Greyhounds are very space efficient. Not only can they compact themselves into an impossibly small ball, fitting themselves into their smaller pet companion bed (even fitting into a Chihuahua bed as full-sized Derby demonstrates to the left), they are one of the best breeds for apartment living. As long as their sharp minds are kept active with play and interaction and they are walked regularly.

MYTH: *Greyhounds retired from the racing industry only know racing. You will miss out on a lot of love if you fear this myth. Greyhounds enjoy running, but that does not mean that is all they do. When fresh from the track they need to be taught what being a house hound is all about. They, typically, learn quickly figuring out retirement as fast as they run.

MYTH: *Greyhounds must be vicious since they wear a muzzle when racing and during turnouts. Greyhounds are very competitive on the race track and in their normal plan activities. They want to be first, to get ahead if they are trailing. Their drive to be first may incite them to nip at the hound ahead of them or during play. This is the reason they wear muzzles. In the majority of cases greyhounds are gentle, love to be petted, and enjoy giving kisses.

MYTH: *Greyhounds are not like other dogs. This is true. Greyhounds are truly exceptional. They are the 2nd fastest land animal behind the cheetah. On the race track, their ability to run fast and win is key. They have unique health numbers. These incredible canines have a lot to offer, due to their track beginnings, they are more loyal, devoted, affectionate, playful, sensitive, and loving...than most other dogs.

They make and keep eye contact. It is said that a greyhound can see into your soul...another reason they are different than other breeds.

MYTH: *Adopting your first greyhound may turn you into a greyhound fan.

This one is also true. Once you have given a retired racing greyhound your heart, there is no going back – these sensitive dogs have a way of leaving their mark on all those who love them.

Xylitol – the Hidden Poison

Compiled and submitted by Barb Ott

Most dog owners know that chocolate, garlic, onions, grapes and raisins can pose a danger if eaten by their dogs. Another common food ingredient that is harmless to humans, but potentially life-threatening if consumed by dogs, is xylitol.

Xylitol, a natural sugar alcohol, is used as a sugar substitute in many foods. It can be found in peanut butter, gum, cough drops, coffee, mints, baked goods, candy, yogurt, diabetic foods, toothpaste, floss, chewable vitamins, cough drops and cough syrup. These products are sometimes, but not always, packaged as: sugar free, reduced sugar, no sugar added, natural, low calorie, low carb, naturally sweetened, etc. Products labeled as such could contain xylitol. Xylitol is extremely toxic to dogs, even in relatively small quantities.

In canines, xylitol is absorbed quickly into the bloodstream, and can cause a potent release of insulin from the pancreas. This results in a rapid and profound drop in blood sugar known as a hypoglycemic crisis, which can be a life-threatening event for your dog. Products can have widely varying levels of xylitol in them, but only small amounts of the substance can cause serious harm. Depending on the concentration of xylitol and the size of the dog, just one stick of chewing gum is enough to make your pet critically ill. In humans, xylitol does not stimulate the release of insulin. In cats, xylitol toxicity has not been documented.

Symptoms of xylitol poisoning are dose-dependent, but usually begin within a half hour of ingestion. In dogs, these symptoms can include vomiting, weakness, poor coordination, lethargy, depression, tremors, seizures, and may rapidly progress to coma. If you suspect your dog has consumed xylitol, you should consider it a medical emergency. Xylitol poisoning can kill a dog in a matter of hours.

The Pet Poison Helpline and ASPCA Animal Poison Control Center both report that cases of canine xylitol ingestion have risen alarmingly in recent years. Xylitol use is becoming more wide-spread in human foods, and consumers are often not aware of its presence. To dogs, it has become a "hidden poison."

If your dog has ingested xylitol, you WILL need to and MUST seek veterinary care. A call to a specialized pet poison center can initiate an action plan and increase the chances of a better outcome. Pet ERs are trained to be thorough, while animal poison control centers are trained to be specific. Pet poison control centers specialize in remote poisonings, and they know exactly what to ask. They also have toxicologists on staff at all times to make sure any specialized testing and treatment plans get forwarded to your veterinarian. This ensures that poison protocol is followed to the highest standard of care.

To prevent xylitol poisoning, always read ingredient labels and keep such products out of the reach of your dogs. Know that manufacturers sometimes change their ingredients, so review those labels each time you buy, especially products like peanut butter. Be careful of mints, candy and gum that may be in your purse, backpack or pockets. Unknown to you, curious noses may find them. Remember, if you suspect your dog has consumed xylitol, take him or her to your veterinarian or emergency animal hospital immediately.

In dogs, xylitol is a potent and fast-acting poison. Time is truly of the essence!

Also see pg 14 for a list of non-food items which contain xylitol that your hound might find tasty...and dangerous.

Protect Your Pets This Summer

Compiled and submitted by Pat Leenerts

According to the 2018 General Social Survey, 58% of Americans own dogs and/or cats. Our pets are members of our family and as such, we need to protect them from the heat of the summer as well. Like humans, cats and dogs can be susceptible to heat exhaustion and heat stroke during the summer months.

Signs that your pet may be overheating:

- Sluggish/loss of energy
- Heavy panting
- Bright red gums
- Vomiting
- Diarrhea
- Agitated
- Widening / enlarge tongue

According to The Old Farmer's Almanac, the Dog Days of summer are traditionally the 40 days beginning July 3 and ending August 11, which coincide with the dawn rising of Sirius, the Dog Star. It makes sense that the name of the Dog Star, Sirius, means "scorching" in Greek. This is soon after the Summer Solstice, which of course also indicates that the worst summer heat will soon set in.

BONUS FACT: If your dog is a puppy, senior, overweight, has a dark-colored coat, or is flat faced (think Pugs and Bulldogs or Persian cats) they are prone to heat stroke and you should take extra caution!

Knowing how to protect your pet can be life-saving! Start implementing some of these tips today so that this summer is the first of many summers full of fun with your fur babies!

- Let your pet play with/eat ice cubes
- Utilize cooling mats
- Keep on top of grooming. Trim or brush your pet but do NOT shave as their coat can act as a way to cool or prevent sunburn.
- Don't leave your pet in the car: it only takes 30 minutes for the inside temperature of a car to rise from 85° to 120°
- Don't leave pets unsupervised by water
- Be mindful of hot asphalt
- Be mindful of food and drinks found at picnics and barbeques that can be harmful to your pet
- Keep your pet away from chemicals used in the garden, tiki torches, citronella candles, swimming pools etc. They are very poisonous to your pet if ingested - Call ASPCA Animal Poison Control at 888-426-4435, press 1 to start a new case, if you think your pet has ingested something poisonous.
- Acclimatize your pets to longer walks and hikes in the heat

The lengths of gigantic greyhound backs
coursing along the south, were his vision of delight; no image of repose for him, but of the life in swiftmess.
- George Meredith,
Beauchamp's Career, 1876

"He hardly touched the elastic cushions of his feet to earth before he again was spread out like a dark, straight thread. This gathering and leaping must be seen, to realize how marvelous is the rapidity and how the motion seems like flying, almost, as the ground is scorned except as a sort of spring board."

-Mrs. George Custer of their "Superb Greyhound Called Byron," Tenting on the Plains, 1887
